

#1 - I know these weekly emails lead to hyperbole like the following ...

tasted this yesterday - it was the best white wine I've tasted ok - not the best ever but man oh man was it good

52% Sav Blanc and 48% Semillion

we thought it was so rich in the mouth that if you blind tasted it you might mistake it for a red wine - then we read what the winemaker had to say:

"Designed to age, we refer to this special design as a "red-wine drinkers white". Very versatile with foods of many styles. Intriguing aromas of honeyed herb tea over the spice and vanilla of oak give way to layers of quince paste, clove, tart apricot and green fig."

isn't that interesting?

52% Sav Blanc and 48% Semillion it is made by one of the most celebrated of California winemakers - Mitch Cosentino - we are also stocking his red wines as well - very, very small lots - less than 300 cases made - I promise you need a bottle of this!
